BEVERLY McCLAIN: Rights are important. Everybody have rights, and a lot of people don't know they have rights.

ROSE LARSON: It's important to make sure that our work is survivor-centered, and that we listen to survivors, and make sure that we have folks in this field who know what the community needs.

ASWAD THOMAS: It's very important to have the voices of crime victims at the center of policymaking. All crime victims have a right to services. All crime victims have a right to heal.
