

Know the Faces of Human Trafficking

*"It was people saying that 'I see you and I care'— that was the thing, I think,
that turned things around for me most."*

You don't need to specialize in human trafficking to serve its many victims. By knowing what human trafficking is, looking for indicators in the clients you serve, and referring potential victims to appropriate services, you can play an important role in identifying and supporting victims.

For more information, visit the human trafficking section of the Office for Victims of Crime website at www.ovc.gov/trafficking or call the National Human Trafficking Resource Center at 888-373-7888.
