Describe any program or educational materials developed during the reporting period.

None. (These materials are routinely developed and updated with state administrative funding, and consist of: brochures for programs to distribute to crime victims about their rights, reparations, the juvenile justice process, financial assistance, language access, testifying in court, victim impact statements, plus the law enforcement cards given to victims when interacting with law enforcement providing contact information for advocacy services.)

Describe any planning or training events held during the reporting period.

The Annual Conference on Crime Victimization hosted by OJP. The conference brings together over 350 victim advocates and volunteers, criminal justice professionals (law enforcement, prosecution, and court services), OJP staff and other allied professionals across the state. OJP offers over 80 lodging/registration scholarships to individuals needing assistance to attend, primarily representing traditionally underserved populations. Scholarships also are available to teams who register together, consisting of victim service advocates and criminal justice system personnel at the local level. A wide variety of victim services and related program issues are presented and discussed over the 2.5 days. Many participants use this opportunity to network with other crime victim service professionals. The crime victim coalitions sponsor a meet and greet and participate on the conference planning committee, selecting conference topics and presenters.

Describe any program policies changed during the reporting period.

We are in the process of reviewing all of our program policies and developing new ones as necessary for greater detail and description of our processes.

Describe any earned media coverage events/episodes during the reporting period.

We had press coverage for Crime Victim Rights Week. This is an annual event that begins with a press conference, followed by daily blogs on the MN Dept of Public Safety website.

Describe any coordinated responses/services for assisting crime victims during the reporting period.

Within our broader office is the Crime Victim Justice Unit (CVJU), which responds directly to crime victims that feel they were not treated fairly or appropriately by criminal justice personnel in relation to the crime victimization they experienced. CVJU staff assist victims and conduct investigations to address their allegations, acting in many ways as a crime victim ombudsman. CVJU staff work together with OJP grant managers when crime victim grantee programs are involved. OJP grant managers also work with the Crime Victim Reparations staff through coordinated training for grantee service providers on better assisting crime victims in filing for Compensation claims. Grant managers include hands-on training about compensation during the comprehensive site visits they conduct with grantees. Together we are working to improve assistance provided to victims, and increase the number of claims filed.

Please discuss the major issues in your state that either assist or prevent victims from receiving assistance during the reporting period.

Victims face barriers of many kinds in accessing services. While we have worked to extend service coverage over the entire state, rurally isolated victims have barriers to services related to lack of transportation, cell phone coverage issues, or not wanting to receive services in a small town where they re known. Language access for all is also an area needing more work. Additionally, there has been an increase in racially diverse populations moving to more rural areas of Minnesota. Often these small towns do not have many culturally specific agencies or services, including crime victim services. Even though agencies have use of Language Line or have Limited English Proficiency plans, some crime victims are reluctant to seek assistance from a primarily Caucasian-staffed agency for fear their particular circumstance will not be understood from someone not representative of their culture. Our office funds 10 of the 11 federally recognized tribes in Minnesota to provide direct services to Native American crime victims. These programs are growing and expanding their reach, and their service numbers continue to rise. Overall the exposure to crime victim issues through media and public awareness campaigns has helped assist victims in receiving assistance.

Please describe ways that your agency promoted the coordination of public and private efforts within the community to help crime victims during the reporting period.

OJP consistently promotes coordinated public and private efforts to aid crime victims in Minnesota, including supporting VINE and VICTIM AICE, and funding the Day One line – Minnesota s Domestic Violence Crisis Hotline and Sex Trafficking Hotline. Victim Information & Notification Everyday (VINE): VINE is a fully automated information and notification service that nearly all of the 87 Minnesota counties and the Department of Corrections have joined. Registered users are immediately notified upon a change in an offender's status for offenders housed in county jails and detention facilities. VINE can relay important custody or arrest information in a matter of minutes, anywhere in the US, via telephone. Users can access information about an offender's custody status in "real time," 24 hours a day. Standard information available through the VINE service includes inmate custody status and location, criminal charge information, sentence expiration date and referral information for law enforcement and victim service provider organizations. Notifications are placed to registered persons upon the transfer, release, escape or death of an inmate. Victims can access the VINE svstem through an 800 number or the VINELink Website and notification can be delivered

Office for Victims of Crime - Performance Measurement Tool ( PMT )

by phone and/or email. VINE was launched in Minnesota in 2002. In addition to VINE, Minnesota worked with the vendor, Appriss, to create VICTIM AICE, an expanded notification system that includes information on inmates of a Dept. of Corrections facility. This has broadened the options for victims statewide, as notification information is available to victims of offenders housed in all types of detention facilities. VICTIM AICE is implemented (the first state in the nation), and we are continuing to make improvements, plus working with Appriss to fix issues. Day One – Minnesota's Domestic Violence Crisis Hotline: OJP provides on-going funding for this critically important program. Day One is housed at Cornerstone, Inc., a domestic violence shelter and community advocacy service program in the metropolitan Twin Cities. The Day One system electronically connects victim service programs providing shelter and hotel/motel services. Through one phone call a victim of domestic violence can access information about available shelter services statewide. Shelter providers must update the web-based system every time their bed space changes, or at least once every 24 hours. The Day One website gives immediate information on available shelter bed space, which can ensure that safety and services are appropriate and immediately available for women and children who need them. Day One also assists in arranging transportation to safe shelter and has greatly increased the number of women and children who are able to secure safe shelter with one phone call. Day One expanded in 2010 and 2011 to include domestic violence community advocacy agencies across the state that assist victims with an array of services, including securing emergency housing with other agencies. Day One is also now the statewide hotline for youth trafficking victims. Minnesota launched a statewide trafficking initiative in conjunction with the MN Department of Health (MDH) and the Women's Foundation, entitled, No Wrong Door. This initiative included changes to legislation – the Safe Harbor law. Starting August 1, 2014, Minnesota youth who engage in prostitution are no longer seen as criminals, but instead as victims and survivors. The Safe Harbor law treats these youth with dignity and respect, and directs them to appropriate services including shelter and housing. MDH received state funding to support youth trafficking shelter programs and the hiring of 8 Regional Navigators (including one Tribal navigator). Regional Navigators offer training and tools to increase the understanding in their region of juvenile sexual exploitation, which is too often misidentified as truancy, addiction, mental health, gang and other adolescent issues.

Please describe any notable activities at the grantee level during the reporting period that improved delivery of victim services.

With the VOCA increase, OJP was able to fund 28 new agencies and increase the total amount of funding awarded statewide by about 34% between FY16 and FY17. All grantees were given 2-year renewal grants for FY18/19 to save on administrative time for them and OJP. The OJP Executive Director and Cecilia Miller meet every other month with the directors of the 6 coalitions (Violence Free Minnesota, MN Coalition Against Sexual Assault, MN Alliance on Crime, MN Indian Women's Sexual Assault Coalition, Sacred Hoop Coalition, and MN Children's Alliance). This meeting focuses on how best we can together help the field of victim service programs. We discuss training needs and joint training initiatives we can coordinate and sponsor statewide, unmet needs and issues expressed from direct service programs, legislative initiatives impacting crime victims and services, and strategic planning to improve the delivery of services statewide. The coalitions each have unique links of communication with their member programs and have been an excellent source of information about the difficulties occurring in the field. Track 1 of the Minnesota Victim Assistance Academy (MNVAA) is a foundation-level educational opportunity provided by OJP in October and November of 2016. Foundations in Victim Services was a week-long intensive course of study designed to improve the quality and consistency of victim services in Minnesota. The students for the academy class consisted of victim service providers and criminal justice professionals who work with victims of crime. Through education, the MNVAA builds the capacity of providers to serve those victimized by crime, encourages cutting-edge thinking about the ways we can help victims regain control of their lives, and focuses on victim-centered multi-disciplinary collaboration building. The MNVAA selects up to 40 candidates to attend the Foundations Academy annually. These participants explore a comprehensive curriculum created specifically for Minnesota by a multidisciplinary committee assembled by the Minnesota Office of Justice Programs. All students who are accepted and successfully complete this 40-hour MNVAA course receive a certificate of completion. Academic credit and CEUs may be available for an additional fee. The Annual Conference on Crime Victims hosted by OJP was held at Cragun's in Brainerd, Minnesota in May 2019. The conference brought together victim advocates and program volunteers, criminal justice professionals (law enforcement, prosecution, court services), OJP staff, and other allied professionals across the state. OJP offers victim scholarships to teams who register together, that consist of victim service advocates and criminal justice system personnel at the local level. A wide variety of victim services and related program issues are presented and discussed. Many participants use this opportunity to network with other crime victim service professionals.

Please discuss each priority (i.e., child abuse, domestic assault, sexual assault, and underserved) in which VOCA funds have been used to assist crime victims during the reporting period

VOCA funds support 74 agencies that serve domestic violence victims, 51 serving sexual assault victims, 68 serving underserved (general crime) victims and 48 serving child abuse victims. Each priority area has program standards that sub-grantees need to adhere to as a recipient of the various types of funding. While each set of program standards are specific to a type of victimization (priority area), they all require provision of services, direct service staff development, systems change and partnering with the other direct service providers in their geographic areas.

Please briefly describe efforts taken to serve Victims of Federal crime during the reporting period.

OJP continues to coordinate often with Adan Perez, an advocate with the Minnesota District of the U.S. Attorney's Office. Adan serves on our crime victim conference planning committee and we have regular contact with him to share ideas, discuss gaps in services, needs assessments, etc. Adan has frequent contact with the Reparations Unit for assistance in obtaining compensation for the federal crime victims with whom he works. Additionally, Adan sits on the Minnesota Victim Assistance Academy committee (details on the Academy in Section D). OJP provides crime victim funding to 10 of the 11 federally recognized Tribal reservations in Minnesota, for domestic violence and sexual assault services. Grant Managers work closely with these programs in addressing their unique cultural and geographic needs and challenges. They conduct site visits frequently to engage with program staff, provide training for capacity building, address program needs, assist in coordination with local non-Tribal victim service programs, and address resource needs for greater program stability. The directors of the two Native American coalitions, (Minnesota Indian Women's Sexual Assault Coalition and the Sacred Hoop Coalition), participate in regular meetings between the victim services coalitions and OJP. These two directors and their staff advise OJP regarding service delivery challenges for American Indian programs, both on and off reservation. They work together with OJP grant managers to provide training and technical assistance to grantees regarding capacity building and programming issues. Grant managers attend their annual training events and work hand-in-hand with Tribal reservation programs on issues. Other OJP staff overseeing JAG funding to Tribal reservations work in concert with grant managers to address issues between reservation-based victim service programs and local law enforcement and Tribal law enforcement, to improve the response to American Indian crime victims. OJP has also worked closely with the U.S. Attorney's Office to address the payment of sexual assault forensic exams for women from the Red Lake Reservation, a non-PL280 reservation.

Please identify any emerging issues or notable trends affecting crime victim services in your state during the reporting period.

Affordable housing options continue to be very limited, which puts much pressure on agencies trying to assist crime victims that need to relocate or transition from shelter to stable housing. This has been a significant issue for the past 14 years, with no real improvement visible on the horizon. It is difficult to quantify just how large of a problem this is, but we consistently hear of the struggles shelter programs face in helping families secure affordable housing. We are working with the MN Coalition for Battered Women (MCBW) and member programs to explore alternative housing strategies to see how we can ease the problem in Minnesota. We have funded a new position within MCBW as a housing coordinator who will be working on policy development and needed changes with other state agencies toward improving the housing situation for domestic violence victims statewide. Programs (especially shelter programs) have been reporting for years that crime victims are presenting with more complex issues around joblessness, lack of familial support, housing difficulties, and a general inability to secure resources – all things that greatly impact their economic stability. Additionally, shelter residents experiencing challenges with mental health has a dramatic impact on programs and services. Rural programs have great difficulty referring crime victims for mental health services, due to a lack of mental health professionals in their rural area. Prosecution of reported sexual assault has been an ongoing issue, despite training for law enforcement and prosecutors. We continue to work with the sexual assault coalition on initiatives to address this (mostly with VAWA funding), but have not seen much improvement. Reporting of sexual assault seems to be on a gradual rise, however, and our funded sexual assault programs are busy serving victims and addressing sexual assault evidentiary exam issues. The MN County Attorney's Association has talked with us about the lack of coordination between city attorney and county attorney offices that impacts the charging of crimes and follow-up. Many smaller city attorneys are on contract from their local law firm, working part-time. There is some discussion about moving anything involving domestic violence to the county attorney office to pursue, so that they don't get dropped so readily, but this would be a big change and if it happens, would likely move slowly. We have heard from our Tribal judge liaison that drug and alcohol problems are a factor in cases of domestic and sexual violence on Tribal reservations. The issues are exacerbating each other, and the availability is limited for after-treatment options. Most of the federal funding that used to support re-entry programs and halfway houses has disappeared. The treatment centers for American Indian Tribal members are consistently filled to capacity and there are limited treatment options that are culturally proficient. Addressing domestic and sexual violence issues on Tribal Reservations without also addressing chemical use is potentially not very effective. A new issue impacting several judicial districts in western Minnesota is that court clerks are charging advocates for a copy of Order for Protection documents. This is within the court's right to charge, but is a burden to the program and is impacting victims who are not able to get to the courthouse themselves. We are in conversation with the MN Judicial Branch, the MN County Attorney's Association and the Chiefs of Police Association representatives about this problem.

Please briefly outline any staffing retention issues that your victim assistance program has and why these issues may occur during the reporting period.

We have not had any staffing retention issues over the past two decades. Up until 2 years ago, our unit has had the same 4 grant managers for the previous 15 years. In February of 2016, we were able to add a 5th grant manager. In August of 2016, one of our grant managers left for another state grants administration position. We hired her replacement in January of 2017 to bring our grant manager number back up to 5. In 2018, we lost one grant manager to retirement and were able to hire 2. One of those has since left. We are looking to fill that position with a person who knows non-profit finance very well and can support our grant managers and grantees through that expertise.

Please explain your state process to publicize its victim assistance funding for services to victims of crime during the reporting period.

Three separate Request for Proposals (RFP) were released during the summer of 2016 for our FY17 funding year. Notices of this funding were distributed widely (through e-mail) to over 3,000 direct contacts representing community of color and culturally specific agencies, criminal justice system personnel, social service agencies, current grantees, etc. We awarded 2-year renewals for our grantees for FY18/19 and FY20/21. We will have a competitive process for all VOCA funding in the summer of 2021.

Please explain how your state is able to direct funding to new/underserved populations during the reporting period.

Our plan, through the competitive process, was to continue priority for funding of programs serving traditionally underserved populations across the state. The grant review process considered the unmet need for services for traditionally underserved populations, and geographic location and distribution of funding statewide, as well as other factors. We publicized the RFPs widely as the goal was to address emerging needs and allow new applicants to come in to the funding process. Of the 168 applications submitted, 17% were from agencies we did not currently fund and 10% of the new applicants were from agencies that primarily serve communities of color. Significant expansion funding was also awarded to a variety of long standing and capable victim service agencies, including agencies that primarily serve communities of color. We look to meet the needs of new/underserved populations with 2 or 3 year time-limited special projects leading up to our next competitive funding process for all VOCA funds in the summer of 2021.

Please explain how your program is able to respond to gaps in services during the reporting period.

We conduct the open competitive process every five years, with grantees completing an annual renewal application in the intervening years. When we discover a specific gap in services during the intervening years we offer a small bridge grant to bring the program into the network of crime victim service grantees, until the next competitive process. This helps those agencies build up their services and programming for crime victims, so that they can compete better in the competitive process. In the past 2-3 years we provided bridge funding to a hard of hearing/deaf program, a start-up hospital based violence intervention program, an Indian Tribal Reservation program, an elder abuse and legal services program, and a new domestic violence shelter for African Immigrant families. This is an excellent way to help programs put themselves in a stronger position to compete in the competitive process, and to expand program to traditionally underserved victims of crime.

Please list and explain any outcome measure(s) that are reported to the governor, legislature, or other state entity during the reporting period.

We provide a compilation of stats from the victim service programs that details the services and demographics of victims served by our grantee agencies. This is provided to the legislature, and is available on our website for anyone to access.
