Developing Tribal Victim Services Policies and Procedures

Guide Overview

This guide serves as a resource for drafting or updating Tribal victim services program policies and procedures. The Office for Victims of Crime (OVC) Tribal Victim Services Training and Technical Assistance (T-VSTTA) program developed this guide for Tribal victim service providers. This guide does not include all possible victim services program policies and procedures. Victim service providers may make additions and modifications, ensuring each policy and procedure addresses the specific needs of their community and clients.

Policies and Procedures Overview

Policies and procedures provide a roadmap for day-to-day program operations. Policy and procedure documents guide decision-making, reduce ambiguity, and ensure compliance with laws and program practices. Written policies document program goals, values, priorities, and behavior expectations. Written procedures explain how the policy is delivered (e.g., who will act, when to act, and what to do in a situation). Implementing clear policies and procedures better equip staff to respond to crises, provide time-sensitive services, and build trust with program clients while offering consistent high-quality care.

OVC Model Standards for Serving Victims and Survivors of Crime

OVC developed the OVC Model Standards to improve the delivery of victim-centered, trauma-informed, and healing-focused services to victims of crime. Programs can use these model standards as a foundation for developing policies and procedures aligned to their organization and community. A list of standards and regulations is in the Appendix as a reference for incorporating trauma-informed and victim-centered approaches to serving victims of crime.

Victim-centered

Placing the crime victim's priorities, needs, and interests at the center of the work with the victim; providing nonjudgmental assistance with an emphasis on client self-determination, where appropriate, and assisting victims in making informed choices; ensuring that restoring victims' feelings of safety and security are a priority and safeguarding against policies and practices that may inadvertently re-traumatize victims; ensuring that victims' rights, voices, and perspectives are incorporated. when developing and implementing system- and community-based efforts that impact crime victims.

Guidance for Drafting Policies and Procedures

Victim service providers may tailor each policy and procedure to its program. Policies and procedures reflect a program's culture, values, mandated services, and needs of clients and the community while ensuring compliance with Tribal codes, and federal and states laws. When drafting policies and procedures, consider the following—

Planning

- Consider the victim services program's mission and determine the policies and procedures to guide program activities.
- Identify relevant Tribal codes, and federal and state laws.
- Review grant funding requirements.
- Identify who will be responsible for—
 - Developing, reviewing, and approving the policies and procedures,
 - Implementing the policies and procedures; and
 - Evaluating and refining the policies and procedures.

Drafting and Reviewing

- Incorporate trauma-informed and victim-centered approaches to serving victims of crime.
- Use plain language that is clear and easy to understand.
- Include policies and procedures appropriate for the local community and culture.
- Seek input from staff, past clients, and key community members and incorporate the feedback.
- Confirm each policy is compliant with applicable Tribal codes as well as federal and state laws.
- Update the policies and procedures on an ongoing basis.
- Ensure new policies and procedures do not conflict with existing policies and procedures.

Implementation

- Obtain Tribal, victim services program leadership, and funder approval of the policies and procedures.
- Train staff and volunteers about the policies and procedures, including during onboarding.
- Seek feedback to evaluate the policies and procedures.
- Implement the policies and procedures and refine based on feedback.

Trauma-informed

Approaches delivered with an understanding of the vulnerabilities and experiences of trauma survivors, including the prevalence and physical social and emotional impact of trauma. A trauma-informed approach recognizes signs of trauma in staff, clients, and others and responds by integrating knowledge about trauma into policies, procedures, practices, and settings. Trauma-informed approaches place priority on restoring the survivor's feelings of safety, choice, and control. Programs, services, agencies, and communities can be trauma-informed.

Example Policies and Procedures

Use the following six policies and procedures as a starting point for creating your own. Victim service providers may adapt the content to address community and client needs.

1. Victim Support and Services Provided

This example policy and procedure outlines the services available to victims of crime outlining to staff members, clients, and key partners the full spectrum of program services including program eligibility requirements and describing who can access services.

2. Safeguarding Client Data

Confidentiality is a central component of protecting a client's safety in seeking services and building trust with service providers. A example procedure on safeguarding client data states how the victim services program protects client data and minimizes re-traumatization during partner referrals.
